Why Totara?

Totara is open source, there are no per user licence fees making it very cost-effective.

In addition to all the great functionality in Moodle, Totara offers the following functionality:

- Competency structures and learning paths – add in your competency structure, link to roles and learning objects to create learner paths
- Individual development plans – managers and staff can create IDPs collaboratively, review progress
- Team management – managers can review progress of their staff and allocate additional learning
- Classroom management – create and manage classroom events, allow users to book courses directly
- Dashboard – quick overview reports ideal for MI reporting
- Reporting – detailed drill down by competency, course or staff member
- HR/ERP/CRM integration – proven large-scale enterprise integrations (e.g., PeopleSoft, SAP and Oracle).

Totara is available for a small annual subscription fee which covers patches, updates and new versions.

Totara also offers a global support and hosting service to provide the 24x7 support and services required by corporates.

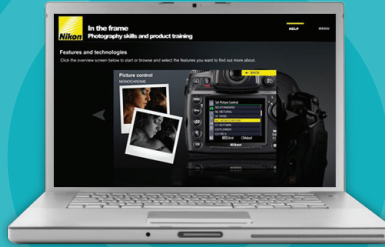

Proven Case Studies

Totara builds on open source software which has been developed and used by companies such as Tesco, Nikon, Cable&Wireless Worldwide, BP and many more.

"We chose open source software for our learning platform to reduce costs and to deliver a world class user experience for our staff."

– Tesco

"Our open source solution delivered on every aspect. We now have a training package that offers more than anything else within the photo industry."

– Nikon

"The reporting module developed for our open source testing platform means we can filter and report right down to question level."

– Cable&Wireless Worldwide

Who is Totara?

Totara is a new company established by three leading companies who develop Moodle solutions for the corporate sector:

Catalyst – Leading open source software developers and one of the original Moodle partners and core code developers.

Kineo – One of the leading e-learning companies, who has developed custom versions of Moodle for corporates such as Tesco, Nike, BP and Timberland.

Flexible Learning Network (now Kineo Pacific, part of the Kineo Group) – E-learning specialists in New Zealand and project leaders of Mahara, the leading open source e-portfolio platform and sister application to Moodle.
